

MOMS WILL BE MOMS

One young man went to apply for a managerial position in a big company. He passed the initial interview, and now would meet the director for the final interview. The director discovered from his resume that the youth's academic achievements were excellent.

He asked, "Did you obtain any scholarships in school?" The youth answered "No."

"Was it your father who paid for your school fees?"

"My father passed away when I was one year old, it was my mother who paid for my school fees," he replied.

"Where did your mother work?"

"My mother worked as clothes cleaner."

The director requested the youth to show his hands. He showed a pair of hands that were smooth and perfect.

"Have you ever helped your mother wash the clothes before?"

"Never. My mother always wanted me to study and read more books. Besides, my mother can wash clothes faster than me."

The director said, "I have a request. When you go home today, go and clean your mother's hands, and then see me tomorrow morning."

When he went back home, he asked his mother to let him clean her hands. His mother felt strange, happy but with mixed feelings, she showed her hands to her son. The young man cleaned his mother's hands slowly. His tears fell as he did that. It was the first time he noticed that his mother's hands were so wrinkled, and there were so many bruises in her hands. Some bruises were so painful that his mother winced when he touched it. This was the first time he realized that it was this pair of hands that washed the clothes everyday to enable him to pay the school fees. The bruises in the mother's hands were the price that the mother had to pay for his education, his school activities and his future.

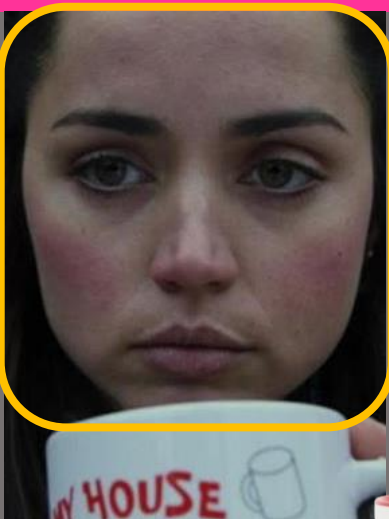

After cleaning his mother hands, he quietly washed all the remaining clothes for his mother. That night, the mother and son talked for a very long time. The next morning, the youth went to the director's office. The director went straight to the point and asked: "Can you tell me what have you done and learned yesterday in your house?"

The young man answered, "I cleaned my mother's hands, and also finished cleaning all the remaining clothes. I know now what appreciation is. Without my mother, I would not be who I am today. And I have come to appreciate the importance and value of helping one's family." The director said, "This is what I am looking for in a manager. I want to recruit a person who can appreciate the help of others, a person who knows the sufferings of others to get things done, and a person who would not put money as his only goal in life. You are hired."

MOST MEMORABLE WEEKEND

1. Go to Google and read the definition of "affection"
2. Ask your Dad for a tie
3. With the help of your sister combine the tie with a shirt
4. Breathe
5. Call your Grandma (on Mom's side) and ask her about your Mom's favorite song when she was a teen
6. Find two candles with candlestick and matches
7. Breathe, maybe take a break outside
8. Wait for dinner
9. At 9 pm put your act together. Careful. This is how it goes: clear up the basement or some big room + create a dim atmosphere with the candles (lights off) + get the music ready on the speakers + dress up + ask your Mom for a dance
10. Get Kleenex and a mop (for when she is melting)
11. Ask your sister to delete those pictures!

HER HOUSE HER RULES HER COFFEE

At least once a year try to follow the mug's code and let your mom be the boss (if she is already, just keep doing what you're doing)
